

Revised Rules for Sequestering Drivers during Truck Driving Championships:

Drivers are encouraged to spend time with their families, except when they are called to compete in their respective class events.

Call to Tent: Prior to their course competition, drivers will be called to the designated driver tent by class group (i.e. 3-axle, twins).

Sequestration: Once called, drivers must remain in the driver tent until they complete their course run. The duration of this time is dependent on the number of competitors in their class. Once drivers complete their course, they may return to their company area.

Observation of Other Classes: While in the tent, drivers are not permitted to observe their class compete on the course.

Attendance Requirement: Announcements will be made to call classes have been called to the driver tent. Our announcer will make these announcements from the stage area by the P.A. system. Make sure someone from your company can hear the announcements. Drivers can also keep aware of the class that is on the course and use the run order to know which class is next in line. Ultimately, drivers are responsible for staying informed. There are no fixed scheduled times; participation is based on the completion of each group's activities. If drivers are not available when their turn arrives, they may face disqualification from the competition.

Pre-Trip Event: Similarly, drivers must be present in the driver tent before their scheduled pre-trip Inspection. Drivers are not permitted to discuss the pre-trip inspection or the course with other drivers.

These rules are implemented to ensure the smooth operation of the competition, uphold fairness among all participants and to ensure an enjoyable experience for everyone involved.
